

Comprehensive N-1B Noun List

First Declension Feminine ēta-Pure Nouns

Most first declension feminine noun stems terminate with alpha. However, two hundred and thirty-eight feminine vocalic stems in NTGreek terminate with ēta. Phonologically, whenever a first declension feminine stem terminates with a letter other than a vowel (epsīlon, iōta, or omīkron), rhō, or a sibilant before the stem vowel, the stem vowel alpha becomes ēta in the nominative singular which is retained throughout all singular forms. The plural case-number forms for all first declension nouns are identical.

Case Formation

The case endings for all n-1b first declension feminine nouns are identical to those of n-1a and n-1c first declension nouns. Comments about their formation follow. The feminine noun, φωνή, serves as the n-1b paradigm.

φωνή́, -ῆς, ἦ́ (sound, noise, voice) φωνη + case ending

n-1b	Singular	Plural
Nominative	φωνή́ ^{1, 2}	φωναῖ́ ⁶
Genitive	φωνῆ́ ³	φωνῶν ⁷
Dative	φωνῆ́ ⁴	φωναῖ́ ⁵
Accusative	φωνή́ ⁶	φωνά̄ ³
Vocative	φωνη ^{1, 5}	φωναῖ́ ⁶

1. The stems of first declension feminine nouns terminating with ēta are identical both in the nominative and vocative singular forms. The nominative and vocative singular forms do not exhibit any inflected case-number ending. The ēta which terminates these nouns is actually the stem vowel. A few introductory NTGreek grammars posit that the case ending for first declension nominative and vocative ending terminates with -η. They do this with the hope it will help the beginning student, but in the end, it actually hinders.
2. The accented nominative singular form is the lexical entry for all first declension feminine nouns. In a Greek-English lexicon, its abbreviated genitive singular follows to indicate its declension-paradigm pattern, then an article to specify its grammatical gender.

3. N-1a feminine genitive singular and accusative plural case endings are inflected identically. Apart from context, a modifying word, or difference of accent, ambiguity exists between these forms. This ambiguity, however, does not exist with η-pure noun stems (φωνῆς / φωναῖς).
4. The feminine dative singular is actually the stem + ι. The iōta regularly monophthongizes and is written under the long alpha as an iōta subscript.
5. First declension feminine vocative singular nouns are ALWAYS identical in case-number to the nominative singular. Context will determine whether the noun is functioning as a nominative or vocative.
6. First declension feminine nominative and vocative plural case-numbers are inflected identically. Context will determine whether the noun is functioning as a nominative or vocative.
7. The genitive plural is -ῶν because of vowel contraction and not because of absorption as in second declension nouns. The circumflex accent is evident of this contraction.

The above morphological comments may be summarized in the following chart for all η-pure first declension feminine nouns. The case endings below are also identical to n-1a and n-1c first declension feminine nouns.

	Singular Case Endings	Plural Case Endings
Nominative	---	ι
Genitive	σ (identical to accusative plural)	ὦν (contraction)
Dative	ι (subscript) (contraction)	ἰσ
Accusative	ν	σ (identical to genitive singular)
Vocative	---	ι
